DETAILED ACTION

1. Claims 1-3 of U.S. Application 09/635561 filed on 08/10/2000 are presented for examination.

Specification

2. The disclosure is objected to because of the following informalities: check spelling for the word "responsitivity" (e.g. page 8 line 9) and any other spelling mistakes may appear.

Appropriate correction is required.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

3. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention thereof by the applicant for patent, or on an international application by another who has fulfilled the requirements of paragraphs (1), (2), and (4) of section 371(c) of this title before the invention thereof by the applicant for patent.

The changes made to 35 U.S.C. 102(e) by the American Inventors Protection Act of 1999 (AIPA) do not apply to the examination of this application as the application being examined was not (1) filed on or after November 29, 2000, or (2) voluntarily published under 35 U.S.C. 122(b). Therefore, this application is examined under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) prior to the amendment by the AIPA (pre-AIPA 35 U.S.C. 102(e)).

4. Claims 1 and 3 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Gupta U.S. Patent 5,996,083.

As for claim 1, Gupta shows a programmable controller for controlling a controlled apparatus by pulse output, comprising: a pulse generating section for outputting a pulse string having a set cycle, a pulse dividing section for dividing the pulse string output from said pulse generating section at a predetermined dividing ratio and for outputting an interruption request signal having a cycle which is n times (n is a positive integer) as great as the cycle of the pulse string (e.g. col. 6 lines 29-59 of Gupta), and a central processing unit for executing an interruption processing in response to the interruption request signal output from said pulse dividing section so as to control the output of said pulse generating section (e.g. from col. 5 line 58 to col. 6 line 13 of Gupta).

As for claim 3, Gupta shows a programmable controller wherein said central processing unit changes the dividing ratio to be used for the division of said pulse dividing section depending on the cycle of the pulse string output from said pulse generating section (e.g. col. 7 lines 20-38 of Gupta).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

5. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

6. Claim 2 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Gupta U.S. Patent 5,996,083.

As for claim 2, it is rejected applied above as in rejecting claim 1. Furthermore, Gupta shows a programmable controller wherein said central processing unit sets a dividing ratio to be used for division of the pulse dividing section, controls the number of pulses output from said pulse generating section (e.g. col. 7 lines 20-38 of Gupta). However, Gupta does not expressly show a programmable controller wherein said central processing unit sets the dividing ratio to be equal to the number of pulses which have not been output when the number of the pulses which are output is smaller than $2n$. Gupta shows available software programs can be use to set the dividing ratio values (e.g. col. 5 lines 60-64 of Gupta) to integer ratios (e.g. col. 6 lines 50-59 of Gupta) and could be adjust by software programs according to the designer (e.g. col. 7 lines 26-38 of Gupta). Thus, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention was made to provide a software program that sets the dividing ratio equal to the number of pulses which have not been output when the number of the pulses which are output is smaller than $2n$, in order to conserve power during high-speed processing of a CPU.

Conclusion

7. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.

Rubinstein U.S. Patent 5,077,686 discloses a clock generator for a computer system with clock divider circuits.

Budd U.S. Patent 5,918,058 discloses a data processing circuit with a power saving mode in operation.

McKenzie U.S. Patent 5,881,297 discloses a method for reducing power in a computer system having a counter and a phase generator.

Maas U.S. Patent 5,848,265 discloses a circuit for measuring the frequency differences between a reference clock and a second clock.

Art Unit: 2121

Hassoun U.S. Patent 6,061,418 discloses a variable clock divider circuit receives an input clock signal and generates an output clock signal having an output clock frequency that is less than the input clock frequency of the input clock signal.
